

Introduction

Excessive indulgence in eatables which are dry, cold, scanty, quickly digestible; sexual intercourse, keeping awake at nights, improper treatments, excessive discharge of doṣa and blood from the body due to administration of inappropriate (pañcakarma and other) therapy, fasting, swimming, long distance walking and such other exercises; loss or depletion of body tissues, worry, grief, extreme debility due to protracted diseases, habit of suppression of natural urges of the body, production of āma (undigested intermediary metabolites), trauma, fasting or diseases of vital organs, riding fast on elephants, starvation, injury or camel, horse or falling during such riding and the like, generate the channels (of vāta) in the body to become empty or dry which in turn aggravate vāyu which, afflicting the patent channels of the body, gives rise to various generalised diseases or to those localised to an part of the body.

Vāta is known as self born and omnipotent because of its dependence, eternity, and all pervasiveness; among all entities, this has universal characters and is worshipped by the entire world because this is the cause of origin, sustenance and destruction of living being, this is unmanifest, but manifest by actions, non unctuous, cold, light, rough, moving obliquely having two properties (sound & touch), with predominance of Rajas, having incomprehensible powers, carrier of Doṣās & Dūṣyās, distinguished in congregation of diseases, quick acting, frequently moving and situated in Pakvāśaya and Guda.

Equilibrium state of Doṣās, Dhātus and Agni is dependent on Vāta. It also receives the sense objects and induces actions related to physical, speech and mind.

Disturbed and pain causing Vāta is responsible for the development of Vātavyādhi. Uncommon disease caused by Vāta is Vātavyādhi. Vātavyādhis are said to be critical because Vāta being the most powerful of all the Doṣās, having the capacity to manifest acute diseases, nature of the disease is severe, these diseases are difficult for management, needs emergency treatment and special therapeutic has to be designed.

Vāta being independent manifest Jvarādi diseases by its own or in combination with Doṣa, Dhātu & Mala; or Vātavyādhi is the root cause for the manifestation of almost all diseases.

There are two types of movement of Doṣās inside the body i.e. normal & abnormal. Pitta having the nature of heat, is responsible for digestion in living beings in normal conditions but when it becomes vitiated causes many diseases. Kapha in normal state, is responsible for strength, but during abnormal condition it becomes waste product. Normal Kapha is considered as Ojas while abnormal one is said to be sinful because it induces misery.

Similarly Vāta in its normal state is responsible for movement, activities, life supporter etc. but in case of abnormal conditions it produces disorders and stops the vital breathing.

Vāta is life, strength and sustainer of living beings. Vāta is the pervasive, and it is the controller of all activities of living beings.

Person can live longer upto 100 years without suffering from any diseases, if Vāta moves unimpaired, located in its own place & it is in its natural state (homeostasis).

Diseases of Vātavyādhi like Āvaraṇa, Dhātustha Doṣaja Vikāra etc. described in first volume of my book.

Vāta gets aggravated by adopting following Nidānās : Excess consumption of ununctious, cold, scanty, & light food; excessive sexual intercourse; excess vigilance; improper therapeutic procedures; administration of therapies which cause excessive elimination of Doṣās and Rakta, excess fasting; excessive movements such as leaping, jumping, warfaring and physical exercise; depletion of Dhātus; excessive emaciation due to worry, grief and affliction of disease; sleeping over uneven beds & sitting in odd postures; anger; day sleep fear and suppression of natural urges; Āma doṣa; trauma; obstinence from food; injuries to vital body parts; falling down from elephants, horses and other fast moving vehicles.

Vāta, Pitta and Kapha move through all channels of circulation. Due to subtle nature of Vāta it impels the remaining two Doṣās. The aggravated Vāta having provoked these two Doṣās gets the scattered into different places of the body, & obstructs the channels of circulation leading to manifestation of various diseases and dries up the bodily tissue elements.

Above etiological factors aggravates Vāta in excess and excacerbated Vāta fills up the empty channels and moves greatly inside them or by getting enveloped by the other Doṣās, which have filled up the channels and produces different kinds of ailments affecting the whole body or a part of the body.

Seronegative spondyloarthritis

It describes a group of related inflammatory joint diseases distinct from RA, which show considerable overlap in their clinical features and shared immunogenetic association with the HLA B27 antigen.

The diseases included are :

- Ankylosing spondylitis
- Reactive arthritis, including Reiter's syndrome
- Psoriatic arthritis
- Arthropathy associated with inflammatory bowel disease.

Clinical features common to seronegative spondyloarthritis

1. Asymmetrical inflammatory oligoarthritis (lower $\geq$ upper limb)
2. Sacroiliitis and inflammatory spondylitis
3. Inflammatory enthesitis
4. Tendency for familial aggregation
5. No association with seropositivity for RF
6. Absence of nodules and other extra-articular features of RA
7. Typical overlapping extra-articular features:
 - Mucosal inflammation: conjunctivitis, buccal ulceration, urethritis, prostatitis, bowel ulceration
 - Pustular skin lesions and nail dystrophy
 - Anterior uveitis
 - Aortic root fibrosis (aortic incompetence, conduction defects)
 - Erythema nodosum
